Foreword

The 1954 edition of the AMERICAN LIBRARY DIRECTORY, the twentieth in the series published by the Bowker Company since 1908, follows the pattern of its immediate predecessors in general arrangement, although typographically it has been handled by a different process. Libraries are listed geographically by state and city, and under each town or city alphabetically by name. In total, 13,857 libraries in the United States, its territories and Canada, are listed, nearly 2,000 more than in the 1951 edition.

COVERAGE

Of this total, approximately half the libraries included are public libraries and, recognizing the importance and growth of the branch library system, information on branch libraries of both city and county systems has been expanded in this volume. 3106 branches, representing 627 systems, are included, making a total listing of 10,031 public library outlets in the country. In order to keep the volume to a practical size, public libraries with total annual incomes of less than $500 or book funds of less than $100 a year were omitted, as were libraries in towns of less than 1,000 population for which no statistics were available. The last edition of the DIRECTORY was compiled on a similar basis. However, the Bowker Company maintains on its stencils complete lists of all public libraries in the United States, currently checked against the lists issued by each state.

A word as to the information included about branches. Our questionnaire asked for the name and address of branches, the name of the librarian and the number of volumes in each branch. The information provided by the various systems was not always consistent and the data has been printed as received. When a branch name is repeated (as Berryville, Berryville), this means that the post office address of the Berryville Branch is Berryville. If there is no repetition of the branch name (as North, 143 Pine St.), this means that the North Branch is located at 143 Pine Street in the same city under which it is listed in the DIRECTORY. The full list of branch libraries is given under each county or city system, but pressure of space made it impossible to cross reference them under the towns in which the branches are located.

All college and university libraries are included, the name appearing alone in the few cases where it was ascertained that the institution was still functioning and yet no answer was received to our questionnaire. A particular effort has been made in this edition to clarify the relationship of various school and departmental libraries in a university library system and to give as much information as possible about each library. All law and medical libraries in colleges are keyed.

The importance of the special library field has been recognized by the inclusion of many such libraries. All available directories from various localities have been checked and questionnaires mailed.

There are many more medical and law libraries on our stencils than appear in the DIRECTORY. This is because the decision was made to include only such special libraries of this type as answered our questionnaires, unless they were given on state lists. Similarly, only those institutional libraries which answered the questionnaire are listed.

Elementary and secondary school libraries are omitted from this volume, except in a few instances where they are part of another educational institution. State school library agencies are listed, but full information about the school libraries of the country is covered in the AMERICAN SCHOOL LIBRARY DIRECTORY (Bowker). Parts 1 and 2, covering 13 Southern and 13 Western States, are now available and Parts 3 and 4, covering 12 Midwest and 11 New England and Middle Atlantic States, will be published within the next year.

SYMBOLS & KEYS

The symbols and keys adopted for the last edition are continued in the 1954 volume. These are noted in detail on page ix. Governmental libraries include not only the federal libraries, but state libraries and libraries serving the armed forces. In many cases these are further indentified by the key to their special field of activity. This is particularly true of the United States government libraries, the Canadian government libraries being more generally classified. With the armed services libraries (a master list of which was obtained from headquarters in Washington), an attempt has been made to locate them in the cities in which the bases are located, but occasionally the entry will appear under the name of the installation. The symbol R used in connection with these libraries is subject to discussion. Actually these service libraries perform the function of a public library, supplying fiction, non-fiction and such technical books as may be demanded. The use of the Symbol R rather than P was an editorial decision made early in the compilation, carrying over the plan of the previous edition of the DIRECTORY.

Our questionnaires again asked that libraries with special collections indicate which of these collections were being expanded. Whenever this information was given, the collection entry is followed by the symbol †. However, many collections not carrying this symbol are active collections, particularly in the case of the special libraries and the large university libraries which may not have answered this query on our questionnaire.

It was our purpose to send every library listed in the DIRECTORY a questionnaire, and this was done except in the few cases where the name of the library came to our attention too late for such a direct check. When the questionnaire was returned to us, the information given was used. However, when neither the original questionnaire nor follow-up requests were answered, we checked with information from state library sources or special library directories and included those libraries which measured up to our basic requirements. Such libraries are listed with an asterisk (*) indicating that the information did not come directly from the library.

The state library organizations have been extremely helpful, not only in supplying the pertinent state statistical information included at the opening of each state's entries, but in sending information about the libraries in the various states. Since each state issues such data on a different basis, the material about individual libraries is not always comparable state by state. For instance, some states have only lists of the libraries and the names of the librarians, with no statistics available as to income or circulation or book funds.

The census figures used in this DIRECTORY are the 1950 census. When individual libraries included the information as to population served or indicated later figures than the 1950 census, such data was incorporated.

INDEXES AND ADDITIONAL FEATURES

Special attention has been given to the indexes this year. The Index to Special Collections has been carefully compiled and further enlarged to include references to departmental libraries within universities in addition to subjects listed under the headings "Special Collections" or "Special Subjects." Memorial collections are indexed under subject, rather than the memorial name. Special libraries in business and industrial firms are also indexed by subject specialty. Collections of state and local history are not included in many cases, since so many libraries listed special collections on their own locale and it is the natural assumption that libraries in certain areas will stress regional material.

With this edition the Index to Memorial Names has been expanded to cover not only such names of large public and university libraries, but to list educational institutions and regional libraries alphabetically by name. This is in response to suggestions from users who find it useful to have the page references for such libraries, the location of which may not readily be known. A page index to Armed Forces libraries and Veterans Administration libraries is also included in this section.

Cross references for county seats have been inserted in the main text to facilitate the location of county library systems. In the case of large industrial companies having special libraries in various parts of the country, cross reference is made to the different locations. All full United States Documentary Deposit Libraries are so indicated in the text.

In addition to listing libraries with microfilming facilities, with this edition information has been added indicating the libraries with record collections and film libraries.

Information received by the Library Journal in regard to key library personnel has been checked up to the time the DIRECTORY went to press in July. Therefore, in some cases no name appears for positions unfilled at our deadline. Changes of address sent by postal authorities have been incorporated up to press time.

Notes of omissions and errors are invited. All reports have been carefully checked, but as had been said in earlier editions, a volume of such elaborate detail can merely aspire to perfection. Special thanks are due to the State agencies for their generous help in supplying information and to all other individuals and organizations who have assisted in the task of compiling this DIRECTORY. Particular gratitude on the part of the editor goes to Dorothy B. Gilbert, Arleane Garnett and Olga Svatik, of the R. R. Bowker Company, for their work in preparing this edition of the AMERICAN LIBRARY DIRECTORY, and to Mrs. E. W. Cattell, of the Science Press, whose cooperation in the production of the book has been so valuable.

General Library:

The M.I.T. Libraries comprise a general library and five divisional libraries corresponding to the Institute's five schools. The individual units are the General Library, the Dewey Library (Industrial Management), the Engineering Library, the Humanities Library, the Rotch Library (Architecture, Planning), and the Science Library.

(The Charles Hayden Memorial Library, opened in January, 1950, was named in honor of Mr. Charles Hayden, M.I.T. '90. Besides the General Library, this building houses the Science Library, the Humanities Library and the Music Library. Housed here also are important additional facilities such as the Exhibition Gallery, the Dard Hunter Paper Museum, the Projection Room, the Boston Stein Club Map Room, and the Microreproduction Laboratory. The General Library has the main collection of some 350,000 books and serials built up since the founding of the Institute in 1861. It also houses the administrative and technical processing departments of the library system, the union card catalog of all libraries and the principal reference collection including the important encyclopedias, biographical directories, indexes, abstracts, bibliographies, periodicals and government documents. There is representative material on most subjects of interest to Institute personnel and comprehensive coverage of subjects which fall outside the normal scope of the divisional libraries. Types of material found here include theses, college catalogs, directories, newspapers, microfilms and special collections.)

Special Collections:

Aeronautics: Prints, broadsides and books on the early history of aeronautics.

Baldwin: The Baldwin collection of about 2000 books on eighteenth and early nineteenth century engineering represents the interests of several generations in a Woburn, Massachusetts family of engineers.

Boston Stein Club Map Room: Some 50,000 maps of the Army Map Service, U.S. Geological Survey topographic sheets and the Young collection of historic American globes.

Bryant, Clark: See Nautical Museum collections.

Derr: Early works in mathematics and physics from the library of Louis Derr, Professor of Physics, M.I.T., 1892-1923.

Eastham: 175 books on microscopy from the seventeenth to the nineteenth century.

Gaffield: Some 275 books, pamphlets, and bound volumes of correspondence, notes, and clippings on nineteenth century glass manufacture in the United States.

Hunter: The Dard Hunter Paper Museum is probably the most complete collection of handmade paper and paper-making equipment in the world. It includes a library of some 500 books.

Kayser: For many years the collection of Professor H. Kayser of Bonn, compiler of the Handbuch der Spectroscopie was the nucleus of the world's information on spectroscopy. This collection of 139 books and 5,637 pamphlets was purchased in 1937 by the Friends of the Library.

Nautical Museum Library: An outstanding collection of rare books, prints, pamphlets, and folios pertaining to shipbuilding, naval history, voyages, whaling, marine engineering, ship model making, and related fields drawn from the Bryant, Clark, Forbes and other gifts.

RCA-Clark: This documentary record of over half a century of radio development contains correspondence files and records of early radio companies, photographs, blueprints, specifications, unpublished biographies, scrap books of clippings and other memorabilia. It was assembled by Mr. George H. Clark, M.I.T., 1903.

Rogers: The Tubby Rogers Collection perpetuates the memory of Robert E. Rogers, Professor of Literature at M.I.T., 1913-1941. It was his delight to introduce students to great books, and this collection in his name will contain the best in world literature in attractive and readable format.

Technology Collection: A treasury of archival and association items with books, pamphlets and reprints by and about Technology alumni and staff and all phases of M.I.T. history.

Vail: The original Vail Collection of about 30,000 books collected by the late Theodore N. Vail and presented by him to M.I.T. forms the basis of the present Vail Library of Electrical Engineering. It includes a representative collection of first editions in sixteenth and seventeenth century electricity and magnetism.

Divisional Libraries:

Dewey Library. 52-360 (Sloan Building), Libn Barbara Klingenhagen. The Dewey Library contains approximately 25,000 volumes of books and bound periodicals which cover the subjects of economics, industrial management, business administration, accounting, marketing, finance, banking, statistics, psychology, sociology, industries, industrial relations, personnel administration, and related fields; over 300 current periodicals on business and economics are received regularly. Special collections are: the Reserve Book Collection, the Marketing Collection, the Corporation File, and the Industrial Relations Library Collection in the fields of labor and industrial relations and personnel administration.

Engineering Library. 10-550, Libn Ralph R. McNay, Assoc Libn Barbara C. Darling. The Engineering Library contains approximately 100,000 volumes (including books, periodicals, theses, etc.) covering the subjects of building engineering, civil and mechanical engineering, naval architecture and marine engineering, electrical engineering, and aeronautical engineering; current periodicals number 490, 65 of them in the Aeronautics Library. The Aeronautics Collection in 33-304 emphasizes the engineering aspects of the subject and has about 20,000 publications including an extensive and much-used duplicate set of technical reports. Some 500 duplicate aeronautical theses and a file of foreign translations form extremely useful collections.

Humanities Library. 14-N132, Libn Burton A. Robie. The Humanities Library contains some 25,000 volumes which are located in the Reserve Book Room (14-N132) and on the second floor of the south wing (within the General Library). In addition to reserve books, Room 14-N132 houses all books in the fields of literature and fine arts; the special collections are the Reserve Books (containing closed and browsing reserves for students in the School of Humanities), the Tubby Rogers Collection, Science Fiction, and the Nautical Collection. Books on the second floor of the south wing cover philosophy, religion, social sciences, philology and history.

The Music Library, an important part of the Humanities Library, is located on the first floor at the east end of the court. The Music Library, consisting of a central listening room plus a seminar room and six smaller listening rooms, has an extensive record collection (3200 78 RPM and 800 LP) and a carefully selected collection of books and scores.

The Arthur Rotch Memorial Library of Architecture and Planning. 7-238, Libn Caroline Shillaber. The Rotch Library contains approximately 25,000 books, bound periodicals, and theses, 172 current periodicals, and about 20,000 pamphlets. Principal subjects include architecture, its history, development, theory, and practice, the art and science of building, materials and construction, elements of building, historic and contemporary building types, graphic standards, drafting, structural methods, building codes, prefabrication, and modern furniture. The planning section covers instruction in city, state, national, and other levels of planning, with publications on closely related topics. Among the special collections are books and other materials on fine arts, a collection of photostats of drawings by Charles Bulfinch and Benjamin Latrobe, a large slide collection of architectural subjects from ancient civilizations up to the twentieth century, and colored slides of contemporary Pacific Coast architecture.

Science Library. 14-S139, Libn Marguerite Chamberlain, Assoc Libn Sibyl E. Warren. The Science Library incorporates the former Eastman, Lindgren and Biology-Food Technology Libraries and contains some 50,000 volumes. The subjects covered are: chemistry (including periodicals in chemical engineering), mathematics, physics, geology, metallurgy, ceramics, biology and food technology, and selected material in meteorology. To facilitate the use of the Science Library's extensive periodical holdings a daily checklist of journals received is available at the circulation desk; reference books, abstracts and indexes are conveniently located, and there is an over-all reserve book collection.

Library Schools & Training Courses

This list includes not only the library schools giving degrees in library science, but many academic institutions offering training in librarianship, particularly for school librarians. It has been based on questionnaires sent to those institutions which indicated that they gave library courses.

The schools marked with an asterisk (*) are those accredited by the American Library Association's Board of Education for Librarianship, under Minimum Requirements for Library Schools adopted by the ALA in October 1933. The double asterisk () indicates the schools which up to the time the Directory went to press, already have been evaluated or re-evaluated under the new three-year program of evaluation of accredited library schools under the Standards of Accreditation adopted by the ALA Council in 1951.

Special libraries in business and industrial firms are also indexed. Collections of state and local history have been omitted since so many libraries list special collections on their own locale.

Index to Memorial Names, Educational Institutions & Regional Libraries

With this edition, this index has been expanded to include not only memorial names of public and college libraries, but to list educational institutions and regional libraries.

Memorial names of only the larger public libraries are indexed, libraries with total incomes of $15,000 or more or book incomes of $2500 annually. Within the larger universities, the memorial names of some special departmental libraries are given. Underlined single names are memorial name entries.

A page index to Armed Forces libraries and Veterans Administration libraries is also included.

Library Journal

is published twice a month from September through June; monthly in July and August. Its advance book appraisals and special issues are scheduled as shown at the right. Over 200 leading librarians review for Lj, working from advance galleys where possible so that their reviews can reach you 2 to 4 weeks in advance of publication. Virtually all important books (2860 last year) are appraised, and each season's output is also previewed in the Announcement Numbers by subject to help you budget ahead.

Lj's book information service, probably the most complete (and completely professional) available at any price is, of course, only one of Lj's regular features. You get also more than 1000 well-indexed pages a year of articles, digests of library literature and news . . .

Library Buying Guide & Advertisements

Library Buying Guide 1954

REPRINTED FROM THE MARCH 15 ISSUE OF LIBRARY JOURNAL

The following pages attempt to provide access under suitable subject headings to the names and addresses of firms (other than publishers) offering products or services of particular interest to libraries. These firms are listed with their addresses on pages 866 to 880 and are numbered from 1 to 285. They are referred to by their numbers under the subject headings below. As in previous years, Lj has tried to indicate at least one source for items used only by libraries, and also for such items of general use as are not always easy to procure locally. Suggestions for changes in future lists will be welcomed from either librarians with unusual sources of supply or from manufacturers with library items not included in this list. No attempt has been made to list items which are available almost everywhere in office supply stores, janitor's supplies stores, etc.

"Keep up" with

LIBRARY JOURNAL

Last year the Library Journal devoted over 200 pages to news of new equipment, new techniques, new buildings. In fact it carried more than twice as much news of all kinds as any other library publication, and its review coverage of the new books was the most comprehensive available anywhere.

More reviews, more promptly

You'll like Library Journal. You'll like the way it lets you decide about the books it cannot recommend unreservedly. You'll like the way its reviews reach you three weeks earlier than the average. You'll like the way Lj reviews are done by practicing librarians—and signed by them. (Over 150 librarians in all parts of the country review for Lj.)

Two services in one

You'll even like the subscription rate when you stop to realize that for the one price you get everything in one—more news more promptly, more reviews more promptly, more classified ads, over 2300 pages a year in 22 issues, regularly $7 but just $5 if your library budget is under $4000. To start your subscription—on approval if you like—drop a card to

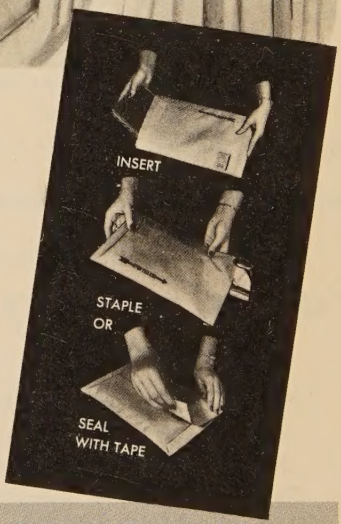
You'll never know how easy it is—

TO PACK AND SHIP A BOOK UNTIL YOU'VE TRIED JIFFY PADDED BOOK BAGS



Even a child can effectively pack a book in a JIFFY PADDED BOOK BAG. Just insert the book—fold over on score—then staple, or use gummed tape for secure closure.

The soft cushiony padding is fully enclosed within double walls of moisture resistant kraft—does not create dust or litter. The bags stack neatly, require little storage space.

—and you can depend on JIFFY PADDED BOOK BAGS to deliver the book in as good condition as when packed. Jiffy's patented expansion cushioning absorbs all shocks in transit, protects covers and corners from damage.
